

For over 60 years Sandlin Homes has been delivering smiles. Since 1957, we've had the honor and privilege of building homes for families just like yours. We are family-owned and operated and that aligns us with the philosophies of our homebuyers. We know what family means and we know that every family starts within the home. We take pride in the craftsmanship, durability and practicality in the homes we build. And it shows in everything we've done since 1957.

Family Building Since 1957

What should this mean to you?

At Sandlin Homes, our family is building for your family. We offer homes that fit into any family's budget, yet they are all built with the exact same pride and craftsmanship. We hold several tenants to be true in each home - energy efficiency, outstanding products, quality trade partners and the utmost dedication to give every buyer an exceptional home-buying experience.

Over 65 years ago, the family-building legacy started with J.B. Sandlin and his dream to deliver quality products, using only the best materials and giving each client a great experience. J.B. taught his heirs the building business from the ground up. They started by learning to pay attention to the smallest detail. Their training and determination has helped them become a second-generation homebuilding company that builds over 200 homes per year in the DFW area.

Family building means security. Sandlin homes has forged relationships with many third parties to ensure that they build above industry standards, remain extremely energy efficient and stay in touch with all the latest trends in homebuilding.

Family building doesn't just represent delivering new homes to our customers; it also means reaching out into our local community. Annually, the Sandlin Family is involved in many local charities and is active on multiple boards that help families in all phases of life.

We take great pride in our company and great responsibility when you place your dream in our hands. We don't just build homes, we build a way of life. Your home is the foundation for your family and Sandlin Homes is there every step of the way.

When you choose Sandlin, you are choosing more than a builder - you are choosing a family.
